(U) Portugal – Eight Portuguese Men Charged with Fighting for ISIS in Syria

(U) Lisbon – Prosecutors in Portugal said they were bringing terror charges against eight Portuguese men suspected of fighting for the Islamic State of Iraq and ash-Sham (ISIS) in Syria. Prosecutors said in a statement the men were suspected of involvement in the 2012 kidnapping by the group of British war correspondent John Cantlie and Dutch photographer Jeroen Oerlemens. The case was opened in 2013 after Portuguese authorities received information about the kidnappings from British authorities. Over the past six-years investigators have traced the radicalization and movements of the men.

(U) South Korea – Industrial Cyber-Espionage Campaign Targets Hundreds of Companies

(U) Seoul – Hundreds of industrial companies are currently the targets of cyber-espionage activity from an advanced threat actor. The adversary uses a new version of an older info-stealer to extract sensitive data and files. The attacker uses spear-phishing emails with malicious attachments often disguised as PDF files. Separ is the malware of choice, which steals login data from browsers and email clients, also hunting for various types of documents and images. The industrial cyber-espionage campaign has compromised at least 200 systems in multiple countries. Almost 60% of the victims are in South Korea, including manufacturers of steel, pipes and valves, an engineering company, and a chemical plant construction company. Companies in other countries that fit the same activity profile have also been hit.
